Edgar Filing: NEOWARE INC - Form DFAN14A

Below is a form of an e-mail message dated July 23, 2007 from Todd Bradley, Executive Vice President, Personal Systems Group, of HP, to certain HP partners:

July 23, 2007

To (contact name will be inserted):

I m writing to let you know that HP issued a press release this morning announcing that we have signed a definitive merger agreement to purchase Neoware, Inc., a publicly held global company that is a provider of thin client computing and virtualization solutions.

We re making this move as part of our strategy to expand into attractive emerging, high-growth areas in this case, thin clients and client virtualization and drive profitable growth for our PC business. As you are probably aware, we already have a portfolio of Windows-based thin clients. Adding Neoware s thin client business will expand our portfolio to include Linux-based thin clients, plus additional software and services for developing customized solutions.

We expect to close the deal in Q4 of this calendar year. Until then, today s announcement should not impact your business with us. HP and Neoware will continue operating as independent companies, and we ask that you continue to conduct business with us separately as you do today.

After the acquisition, HP plans to integrate Neoware into our Business PC organization, led by VP Kevin Frost, as part of our Desktop Global Business Unit.

Please have your teams contact Kevin s team directly if you have any questions. Long-term roadmaps and an organizational structure will be made available as soon as possible after the close.

Best regards,

Todd
