The Fund

A LETTER FROM THE PRESIDENT

Dear Shareholder:

This annual report for Dreyfus High Yield Strategies Fund covers the 12-month period from April 1, 2013, through March 31, 2014. For information about how the fund performed during the reporting period, as well as general market perspectives, we provide a Discussion of Fund Performance on the pages that follow.

Although the past 12 months proved volatile for the overall U.S. bond market in light of accelerating economic growth and a shift to a more moderately accommodative monetary policy, these factors and improving business conditions helped support relatively strong results from high yield corporate securities. In contrast, U.S. government securities generally delivered anemic returns in an environment of rising long-term interest rates.

Looking forward, we remain optimistic regarding the high yield bond market's prospects. We believe the domestic economy will continue to strengthen over the next several years, which could further enhance underlying business fundamentals and keep default rates low. In addition, the recovering economy could boost demand from investors who feel more comfortable reaching for higher yields from lower rated securities. As always, we encourage you to discuss our observations with your financial advisor to assess their potential impact on your investments.

Thank you for your continued confidence and support.

J. Charles Cardona President The Dreyfus Corporation April 15, 2014

DISCUSSION OF FUND PERFORMANCE

For the period of April 1, 2013, through March 31, 2014, as provided by Chris Barris, Portfolio Manager

Fund and Market Performance Overview

For the 12-month period ended March 31, 2014, Dreyfus HighYield Strategies Fund achieved a total return of 10.50% (on a net asset value basis) and produced aggregate income dividends of $0.3960 per share.¹ In comparison, the BofA Merrill Lynch U.S. High Yield Master II Constrained Index (the "Index"), the fund's benchmark, achieved a total return of 7.52% for the same period.2

Although high yield bonds encountered heightened volatility in anticipation of a more moderately accommodative monetary policy from the Federal Reserve Board (the "Fed"), they continued to fare better than most other segments of the U.S. bond market. The fund produced higher returns than the benchmark, mainly due to a focus on lower rated securities and a relatively short average duration.

The Fund's Investment Approach

The fund primarily seeks high current income. The fund also seeks capital growth as a secondary objective, to the extent consistent with its objective of seeking high current income. The fund invests primarily in fixed-income securities of below investment-grade credit quality. Issuers of below investment-grade securities may include companies in early stages of development and companies with a highly leveraged financial structure. To compensate investors for taking on greater risk, such companies typically must offer higher yields than those offered by more established or conservatively financed companies.

High Yield Bonds Held Up Well as Interest Rates Climbed

Long-term interest rates began to move higher early in 2013 when fixed-income investors responded nervously to stronger U.S. economic growth, including sustained improvements in employment and housing market trends. The bond market's more interest rate-sensitive sectors, such as longer term U.S. government securities, suffered price declines, while corporate-backed securities held up relatively well as issuers' underlying business fundamentals improved.

The market's worries about rising interest rates intensified in late May, when relatively hawkish remarks by the Fed's chairman were interpreted as a signal that the central bank would back away from its quantitative easing program sooner than expected. Consequently, prices in most bond market sectors, including lower rated corporate-backed bonds, fell sharply. The market generally stabilized over the summer, and bonds rallied in the fall when the Fed unexpectedly refrained from tapering its quantitative easing program. However, additional evidence of accelerating economic growth sparked renewed bond market volatility over the final months of 2013. The Fed implemented the first of several modest reductions of its bond purchasing program in mid-December, which briefly drove the yield of 10-year U.S.Treasury securities above 3% for the first time in more than two years.

High yield bonds proved relatively insensitive to rising interest rates, as underlying credit conditions remained strong in the recovering economy. Prices of high yield securities generally ended the reporting period close to where they began, and their high levels of current income enabled the asset class to produce substantially better returns than other fixed-income market sectors.

Several Strategies Supported Relative Performance

The fund's credit quality, sector allocation, security selection, and interest rate strategies proved effective during the reporting period. We generally emphasized bonds with credit ratings in the B and CCC ranges, which occupy the lower tiers of the high yield spectrum and provide greater levels of income than their higher rated counterparts. From a sector allocation perspective, the fund benefited from underweighted exposure to the utilities sector, where low commodity prices and bankruptcy concerns weighed on investor sentiment. Instead, we favored the better performing chemicals and information technology sectors.

Our security selection strategy proved especially beneficial in the information technology and financials sectors. We also picked a number of winners among bonds issued by cable television service providers. Our interest rate strategies further buoyed relative results, as a relatively short average duration over much of the reporting period helped cushion the impact of heightened market volatility.

Disappointments were relatively modest over the reporting period. Underweighted exposure to the financials sector and an overweighted position in the packaging industry detracted mildly from relative results, but the adverse effects of these allocation strategies were offset by strong security selections in both industry groups.

A Generally Constructive Outlook

We currently expect the U.S. economic recovery to persist, potentially driving long-term interest rates higher. Nonetheless, we have continued to identify attractive opportunities among high yield bonds, which we expect to benefit further from improving credit conditions, low default rates, and narrowing yield differences relative to U.S. Treasury securities. Therefore, as of the reporting period's end, we have maintained a generally constructive investment posture, with a focus on bonds with credit ratings toward the lower end of the below-investment-grade range. In addition, due to the likelihood of higher long-term interest rates, we have maintained the fund's average duration in a position that is modestly shorter than that of the benchmark.

April 15, 2014

Bond funds are subject generally to interest rate, credit, liquidity, and market risks, to varying degrees. Generally, all other factors being equal, bond prices are inversely related to interest-rate changes and rate increases can cause price declines. High yield bonds are subject to increased credit risk and are considered speculative in terms of the issuer's perceived ability to continue making interest payments on a timely basis and to repay principal upon maturity. The use of leverage may magnify the fund's gains or losses. For derivatives with a leveraging component, adverse changes in the value or level of the underlying asset can result in a loss that is much greater than the original investment in the derivative.

1 Total return includes reinvestment of dividends and any capital gains paid, based upon net asset value per share.
Past performance is no guarantee of future results. Share price, yield and investment return fluctuate such that upon redemption, fund shares may be worth more or less than their original cost. Return figure provided reflects the absorption of certain fund expenses by The Dreyfus Corporation during the period. Had these expenses not been absorbed, the fund's return would have been lower. Pursuant to an agreement in effect through September 30, 2014, The Dreyfus Corporation will absorb certain fund expenses, at which time it may be extended, modified or terminated.
2 SOURCE: FACTSET — Reflects reinvestment of dividends and, where applicable, capital gain distributions. On September 25, 2009, the Merrill Lynch U.S. HighYield Master II Constrained Index was renamed the BofA Merrill Lynch U.S. HighYield Master II Constrained Index is an unmanaged performance benchmark composed of U.S. dollar-denominated domestic andYankee bonds rated below investment grade with at least $100 million par amount outstanding and at least one year remaining to maturity. Bonds are capitalization-weighted. Total allocations to an issuer are capped at 2%. Investors cannot invest directly in any index.
