To Our Shareholders

I am pleased to present you with a summary of business results for the six month period ended September 30, 2004.

During the first half of the fiscal year, corporate performance continued to recover while the Japanese economy maintained positive real economic growth. Although trading volume on the First Section of the Tokyo Stock Exchange remained high, stock market conditions in general were sluggish. Against such a backdrop, under accounting principles generally accepted in the United States (U.S. GAAP), net revenue (total revenue excluding interest expense) for the six months ended September 30, 2004 was ¥370.8 billion, income before income taxes was ¥88.7 billion, and net income was ¥44.0 billion. Return on equity (ROE) was 4.9% per annum. The interim dividend for the six months ended September 30, 2004 is ¥10 per share.

Although we continue to do business in a very competitive environment, the domestic economy has steadily recovered and the non-performing loan problem will likely be resolved soon. We therefore feel that the stage has been set for the overall Japanese economy to make a full-fledged recovery. Strong performance in the corporate sector has driven both an increase in aggressive mergers and acquisitions as well as an increase in capital market utilization to fund capital investment activity. For the first time in two years, household sector financial assets now exceed ¥1,400 trillion, and the ratio of individuals' assets invested in stocks and investment trusts has grown over the past year. Indeed, as evidenced by the deregulation of the securities brokerage business and securities tax reforms, efforts are being made to increase participation in Japanese securities markets among a broader segment of the population.

Our goal is to provide every customer with quality, tailor-made services and to provide businesses with prompt, beneficial solutions to their complex needs. To maintain our firm foothold in the growing securities business, we will continue to raise our corporate value by bolstering our global business operations while contributing to the continued growth of the Japanese economy and securities markets.

I would like to ask for your continued support.

Interview with COO Hiroshi Toda

Deputy President & Chief Operating Officer

- Japanese securities markets are growing to embrace a broader segment of the population, as evidenced by the shift of individuals' financial assets to securities products. How does Nomura plan to capitalize on this growth?

Toda: In Japan, businesses have long relied on indirect financing. During this period, we have warned that society as a whole will suffer if the securities markets, which support direct financing, do not function properly. Today, backed by societal demand for securities markets development, and through securities tax reforms and other related changes, the country is steadily building the infrastructure to promote the shift of individuals' funds into the capital markets. I cannot recall a time when our business objectives have been so intimately linked to societal demands as they are today. As the leader in the Japanese securities market, we intend to take the initiative towards realizing this shift from indirect financing to direct financing. It is important for us to achieve growth by taking dynamic actions that change the way money flows in the economy and contributing to the stimulation of the market.

- How do you plan to carry out this shift to securities investing?

Toda: To encourage individuals to shift their financial assets from savings and insurance products to securities investments, Nomura must identify the key segment of the population in which this shift will primarily occur, and prepare a system for providing highly-specialized financial services that meet the specific needs of this segment. While Nomura has succeeded in bringing a greater influx of customers into the growing capital markets, there is still room for growth.

Young adults in the early stages saving and planning for their financial futures as well as people nearing retirement age with little or no experience in securities investing are emerging as the two key groups that hold the key to expanding the securities market's base and sustaining Nomura's future growth. We must study how we can encourage these prospective customers to utilize Nomura's services as well as what specific services we can offer them.

- How will Nomura achieve growth in the expanding securities market?

Toda: First, it is important that we are aggressive in emerging growth areas in the securities markets. We must also adapt the business model for the securities business, which is Nomura's core business, to rapid changes in the marketplace.

Individuals and corporate customers alike are seeking, in the capital markets, solutions that they had heretofore only sought in indirect financing. As boundaries become increasingly thin between direct financing and indirect financing, as evidenced by real estate transactions involving structured finance and loans involving various financing methods, conventional means of direct financing will no longer meet customers' expansive and diverse needs.

Edgar Filing: NOMURA HOLDINGS INC - Form 6-K

Therefore, Nomura's growth is dependent upon whether it can invest business resources in such growth areas and how it can propose the means and solutions to respond to customers' needs. As the securities markets expand, we will take advantage of the synergy of Nomura Group companies to take the initiative and make appropriate and useful proposals to customers in the expanding securities markets.

- Do you expect competition to heat up even more in the growing securities business, which you have pointed out as being a growth industry?

Toda: Yes, I do. As the market grows and deregulation progresses, the number of newcomers is likely to increase and specialized companies will find it easier to grow their businesses. This is exactly where the securities industry is today. As the industry leader with the greatest market share, we clearly recognize the pitfall of aiming for average performance and catering to the masses, being content with reasonable profits, and consequently losing sight of customer needs that have become more specialized than before.

Table of Contents

While online stockbrokers are gaining market share, we recognize the risk of offering younger people the same comprehensive services that we offer older customers. It is important to accurately determine the needs that are becoming specialized and focus upon the most promising market segments.

- How will Nomura Group establish itself as a globally competitive Japanese financial services group?

Toda: Nomura is already recognized as one of the few Japanese financial institutions with global reach, and we must continue to raise our corporate value.

One example of recent success is in our principal finance business. Nomura has gained experience in this business in overseas markets like London and New York. In the last two or three years, we have been aggressive in developing this business in Japan as well, and have been quite successful.

As this example illustrates, successful global development comes from keeping a constant watch for business opportunities worldwide and having a network to capitalize on chances. As evidenced by the BRICs (Brazil, Russia, India, and China), there are many countries around the world that are in the process of developing.

I feel that, as a global company, one of Nomura's missions is to provide our Japanese retail and corporate customers with solutions that utilize overseas markets, such as proposing an investment portfolio of assets whose growth patterns differ from those in Japan.

- What about Nomura's global competitiveness?

Toda: Markets around the world are growing rapidly. At the same time, a merging of markets is under way. Due to their strengths in their home countries, top-level European and American financial institutions that are referred to as "global players" have the ability to instantly capture merging markets and operate in the new markets.

While true that it would be extremely difficult for us to develop the same abilities as some of the "global players" have, the rapidly recovering Japanese market, the foundation of our business, presents an excellent opportunity to close the gap.

By providing Japanese customers with global-based solutions, we intend to steadily increase our presence as a global financial institution and raise our corporate value.

Business Results for the Six Months Ended September 30, 2004 (Consolidated basis)

Summary of Business Results

Buoyed by a recovery in exports and capital investment with solid global economies in the background, the domestic economy was strong in the April-June period with positive real economic growth for the 5th consecutive quarter.

The domestic stock market was especially active with average daily trading volume on the First Section of the Tokyo Stock Exchange setting a new historical record in April.

In the second half of the term, however, the stock market grew stagnant due to negative factors including concerns about a global economic slowdown stemming from the high-price of crude oil. The bond market also continued to waffle. Long-term interest rates temporarily jumped to above 1.9% in June due to high expectations for economic recovery, but soon started to decline over concerns of an economic slowdown, and fell to the 1.4 % range in September, nearly equivalent to the rate level of March. In this environment, net revenue (total revenue excluding interest expense) was ¥370.8 billion, down 11% from the same period in the previous year, income before income taxes ¥88.7 billion, down 44%, and net income ¥44 billion, down 49%. As a result, return on equity (ROE) turned out to be 4.9 % on an annual basis.

Segment Information

Domestic Retail

In Domestic Retail, net revenue (total revenue excluding interest expense) was ¥151.7 billion, up 1% from the same period in the previous year, and income before income taxes was ¥43.5 billion, up 10%.

Having focused on expanding our customer base, we also succeeded in boosting client assets (including those of financial institutions) in Domestic Retail to ¥41.3 trillion, an increase of ¥500 billion compared to the end of March 2004. This growth was achieved by utilizing our Core Value Formation strategy to provide high-quality financial services that match our individual customers' diverse management needs.

In particular, sales of Japanese government bonds for individuals (Issues No. 7 and No. 8) totaled ¥700 billion, which kept our distribution share at a high level of approximately 25%. We also increased our sales of variable annuity insurance to capture the top spot in this area, as we continue to increase the amount of individuals' financial assets that we have in custody.

Table of Contents

To raise efficiency, a Financial Management Division was established in April 2004 to establish a framework to enhance services in response to the increasingly complex and diverse needs of wealthy investors. In addition, in October we opened new offices in Hachinohe, Aomori Prefecture and Ota, Gunma Prefecture, and in Sasebo, Nagasaki Prefecture and Kumagai, Saitama Prefecture in November. These new openings will help us improve the convenience for clients and contribute to the further expansion of our customer base.

Global Wholesale

Global Wholesale consists of 3 business lines: Global Markets, Investment Banking, and Merchant Banking. In this period, the Global Wholesale segment earned net revenue (total revenue excluding interest expense) of ¥152.9 billion, down 27% from the same period in the previous year, and income before income taxes was ¥42.7 billion, down 55%. Global Markets, created in April 2004 by combining Global Fixed Income and Global Equity, produced income before income taxes of ¥34 billion, a decrease of 61% compared to the same period of the previous year, due to a drop in bond order flow, particularly that of foreign currency denominated bonds.

In Investment Banking, equity finance activity was especially high. We acted as lead manager for a number of major deals including an initial public offering by J Power (Electric Power Development Co., Ltd.) and a capital increase through a follow-on public offering by AEON. We also utilized the new, tailor-made MPO (Multiple Private Offering) financing scheme to underwrite a convertible bond issue by of Isuzu Motors.

These efforts resulted in income before income taxes of ¥13.7 billion, up 72% from the same period in the previous year. Merchant Banking posted gains from exit transactions but its income before income taxes declined from the ¥700 million of the same period of the fiscal year to a loss of ¥5 billion, largely the result of the funding costs for assets held in Europe. In the current business period, we are actively involved in the domestic corporate rehabilitation business, including our investments in the Millennium Retailing Group and Huis Ten Bosch.

Asset Management

Asset Management produced net revenue (total revenue excluding interest expense) of ¥20.7 billion, up 27% from the same period in the previous year, and income before income taxes recovered from a loss of ¥2.4 billion in the same period of the year before to a profit of ¥3 billion, resulting from a rise in asset management fees primarily attributable to an increase in the net asset balance of stock investment trusts. The balance of assets under management in Nomura Asset Management (NAM), the core entity in Nomura Group's Asset Management operations, totaled ¥15.1 trillion, a decrease of ¥600 billion from end of March 2004, owing primarily to cancellations of bond investment trusts.

We have launched three new Fund Masters Series products to expand our line of fund of funds products. Fund of funds assets have more than doubled since the end of March 2004, and have grown to approximately ¥280 billion at the end of September. We are also continuing our efforts to increase assets invested in investment trusts sold exclusively through banks. Having added three new funds in the current period, the total balance of assets under management for the funds distributed exclusively through banks grew dramatically from approximately ¥13 billion at the end of March 2004 to approximately ¥32 billion at the end of September 2004. In our defined contribution pension plan business, the number of plans to which we supply products has increased to 289 and we have increased investment trust assets from ¥39 billion as of the end of March 2004 to approximately ¥60 billion.

Securities Seminars in Local Communities

We offer educational and informational seminars on finance and securities to local communities and at workplaces that provide lifelong learning facilities, aiming to provide opportunities for people to learn about the economy, finance, and other ways in which the world of money works and relates closely to their lives.

Table of Contents

The focus of the educational program is mainly on introducing ideas for life and financial planning needed to enjoy a comfortable retirement. Other topics include how to be good with money which sounds simple but is actually quite difficult for many people.

Our experienced instructors always try to make programs easy to follow, even for beginners. We began providing these programs in 2003 and already over 28,000 people have taken the course at 170 sites nationwide.

Securities Seminar at Thailand's Chulalongkorn University

On August 28, 2004, the second annual special lecture on securities was held at Chulalongkorn University, a national university in Thailand. This year's lecture was delivered to over one hundred students studying for their MABE (Master of Arts in Business and Managerial Economics). The lecture, given by an economist from Nomura Securities' Financial & Economic Research Center, was titled "Institutional Dollarization of Asian Currencies."

Support for PMF (Pacific Music Festival)

I have decided to spend all of my remaining time and energy to educate young people.

These were the words of the late Leonard Bernstein during his opening ceremony remarks at the inaugural PMF.

PMF is an international music education festival established in 1990 at the suggestion of the late Leonard Bernstein, the great musician representing the 20th Century. Over one hundred young musicians are chosen from around the world and gather each summer at Sapporo Art Park to take part in the educational program "PMF Academy" taught by outstanding musicians, including principals from the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra. Marking the 15th year since its establishment, the festival was fortunate this year to have principal conductor Mr. Nello Santi and other members from the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra instruct the 26-day academy from July 10 through August 4. The open lessons and the resulting performance were presented during 41 concerts held mostly in Hokkaido's Sapporo area as well as in Tokyo and Osaka. Next year's event will commence on Saturday, July 9, 2005.

Nomura Securities Co., Ltd. and Nomura Cultural Foundation support the PMF's mission "To broaden and develop the world's music by nurturing young musicians," and are happy to be special corporate sponsors of the Pacific Music Festival.

Support for Neurinpici

The National Health and Welfare Festival (Neurinpici) was first held in 1988 to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Health and Welfare Ministry (current Ministry of Health, Labor and Welfare). The 17th Neurinpici was held in Gunma this year and the festival is increasing its presence nationwide with elderly people as the principal players in the event.

Nomura Securities Co., Ltd. supports the festival and its aim of promoting a society in which people can enjoy long lives full of friendship and energy.

Table of ContentsPublication of CSR Report

As increasing importance is being placed on CSR (Corporate Social Responsibility), an increasing number of Japanese companies are now working on this issue. At Nomura Holdings, we are pleased to have published our first CSR Report. Stakeholders were formally provided with information through annual reports, social activity reports, and through our web site, but we consider it vital to further enhance communication with them through CSR Reports and provide a better understanding of the Nomura Group.
