The following is an email sent by Thomas A. Renyi to all employees of The Bank of New York Company, Inc. on December 4, 2006:

Subject: The Bank of New York Company, Inc. and Mellon Financial Corporation Agree to Merge

Dear Colleagues,

Today I am proud to announce the agreement to merge two great companies, The Bank of New York Company, Inc. and Mellon Financial Corporation, creating a new global market leader in securities servicing and asset management. We are convinced that this is a powerful combination and one that, in today's competitive environment, will provide the kind of long-term growth and viability that our shareholders demand and our employees can depend on.

Over the past decade, both The Bank of New York and Mellon have been working to transform our respective businesses in response to changing markets and opportunities. The result of this hard work has been the creation of two of the most respected providers in our industry globally. You should all be proud of your contributions to The Bank of New York's reputation and success.

You will also play an important part in the success of this merger. Through this time of change, we must stay focused on our clients. A small group will be preparing for the close of the transaction by the third quarter of 2007. For the rest of us, it is business as usual. Our clients expect and deserve the same enthusiasm and excellent service you have been providing all along. I am confident that you will deliver on this promise.

Our new company will be called The Bank of New York Mellon Corporation and will be headquartered in New York, which will provide a key competitive advantage. The Bank of New York Mellon will also remain committed to a continuing strong and growing employee presence in Mellon's home city of Pittsburgh, which will be home to several businesses and a center of excellence for technology, operations, and administration. I will serve as Executive Chairman of the combined entity, with primary responsibility for the successful integration of our two companies, until my retirement 18 months after the close of the transaction. Mellon CEO Bob Kelly will serve as Chief Executive Officer of the new Company and will also assume the title of Chairman at my retirement. Bank of New York President Gerald Hassell will be President of the new company. Bob and Gerald will work closely together to oversee strategy and the execution of our business plan.

The merger will combine powerful franchises with global leadership positions in a wide array of complementary businesses, including securities servicing, asset management and private wealth management. We will be the world's leading asset servicer, with $16.6 trillion in assets under custody, and corporate trustee, with $8 trillion in assets under trusteeship, and will rank among the top ten global asset managers, with more than $1.1 trillion in assets under management. With a combined pro forma market capitalization of approximately $43 billion, The Bank of New York Mellon will be the 11th largest U.S. financial institution and a true global financial services growth company.

The business reasons for the merger are clear and compelling. But more than that, the combination of these two companies makes tremendous sense in terms of culture and commitment. We share very similar missions and values particularly in terms of client service, integrity and excellence. Both institutions also share the firm conviction that our people are the source of our strength.

It is our commitment to our employees individually and collectively that I want to reinforce today. As we merge the many talents of our two organizations into one winning team, we will create a unique and inclusive culture that will open new opportunities for professional and personal growth for our people.

Prompt and clear communication will be the hallmark of this merger. This will include frequent e-mails, global town hall meetings and conference calls, and ongoing updates on our employee intranets. In addition, our senior management team will be visiting many offices to meet with you and to listen to what is on your minds.

As with any merger of this size, there will be overlap in job responsibilities, and we want to be straightforward about this from the start. Following the close of the transaction by the third quarter of 2007, approximately 10 percent of our combined workforce of 40,000 will be reduced over a three-year period. We will rely on normal attrition wherever possible, and we will provide extensive support to eligible employees who are affected. Though it is too early to determine exactly where the impact will be felt, we are committed to timely communication as decisions are made.

I know that you will have many more questions about this merger than can possibly be answered in this announcement. For your immediate information, you can refer to the press release, transaction fact sheet and employee Q&As posted on myWorld (myworld.bankofny.com). Your managers and other senior executives will also be reaching out to you in team meetings.

In closing, I would like to reiterate my enormous enthusiasm for this historic merger of two great institutions. It is my strong belief that this transaction marks a new era in our industry and that together we will forge a new and unique global financial services leader. I look forward to building that future with you.

Sincerely,

Thomas A. Renyi
Chairman and CEO
