Strategy and Performance Overview

How did the Fund perform?

For the six-month reporting period that ended November 30, 2015, the Prudential Short Duration High Yield Fund returned 4.34% on market price and 2.01% based on NAV. For the same period, the Lipper High Current Yield Funds (Leveraged) Average returned 7.80% and the Barclays US High Yield Ba/B 1-5 Year 1% Issuer Constrained Index (the Index) returned 4.54%. All returns reflect reinvestment of dividends. Please note that Lipper performance returns are based on each fund's NAV.

What were conditions like in the short-term US high yield corporate bond market?

High yield corporate bonds struggled at the beginning of the reporting period, pressured by volatile oil prices, concerns about Federal Reserve (Fed) interest rate hikes, and uncertainty surrounding Greece's debt problems.

In the third quarter of 2015, high yield bond prices declined, as spreads—the amount of extra yield that high yield bonds provide over similar-duration US Treasury securities—widened. Worries about slowing economic growth in China and falling commodity prices weighed on investor sentiment.

During October, the high yield bond market rebounded sharply, resulting in its first positive monthly return since May and its largest monthly gain in two years. A weak jobs report drove speculation that the Fed would delay a rate increase, which provided a boost to riskier asset classes. Better than expected corporate earnings, respectable economic data from China, and further monetary policy accommodation from non-US central banks also contributed to the improved mood.

In November, high yield bonds erased most of their October gains, posting their fifth monthly decline of the reporting period. The sell-off was driven by anticipation about a potential Fed rate hike in December, persistent commodity price weakness, and rising risks in a number of non-commodity related sectors such as cable, telecom, health care and retail.

For the period as a whole, higher quality, shorter duration high yield bonds (as represented by the Fund's Index) outperformed the broader high yield market.

According to Lipper, domestic high yield fund flows were negative with $3.5 billion of investment outflows year-to-date.

New issuance declined. Volume totaled $289 billion in the year-to-date through November, down 17% from the same period in 2014.

The US speculative grade default rate, as measured by the Moody's issuer default rate, rose from 1.94% at the beginning of the period to 2.98% at the end of the period.

What strategies proved most beneficial to the Fund's performance?

The Fund benefited from effective sector and issue selection during the reporting period.

Within the Fund's sector allocation, a large underweight position versus the Index in the upstream energy sector was the biggest positive contributor to performance. (The upstream energy sector generally refers to companies engaged in energy exploration and production.)

Overweight positions versus the Index in the technology; gaming, lodging, and leisure; building materials and home construction; health care and pharmaceutical; and cable and satellite sectors also added to the Fund's returns during the period.

Investments in the transportation and environmental services, technology, paper and packaging, and upstream energy sectors contributed positively to the Fund's relative results.

The Fund benefited from its lack of exposure to certain issuers within the energy sector. More specifically, the Fund did not own upstream energy names Linn Energy, Chesapeake Energy, Sandridge Energy, and Energy XXI, all of which performed poorly during the reporting period. Underweight positions in transportation and environmental services company Abengoa Yield and in metals and mining name United States Steel also bolstered returns.

What strategies detracted most from the Fund's performance?

The Fund's performance was hurt by its underweight positions in the banking, financials, and telecommunications sectors.

Issue selection in the health care and pharmaceutical; gaming, lodging and leisure and retailers and restaurants sectors detracted modestly from performance.

The Fund's performance was hampered by its overweight positions in metals and mining companies Murray Energy Holdings and Berau Coal. Lack of exposure to banking names Ally Financial and Royal Bank of Scotland also dampened results.

How did the Fund's leverage strategy affect its performance?

The Fund's use of borrowing (leverage) detracted from returns as a result of the negative performance of the holdings as well as the cost of borrowing.

As of November 30, 2015, the Fund had borrowed $200 million and was about 26.4% leveraged. During the reporting period, the average amount of leverage used by the Fund was approximately 26.2%.
