TEVA TO APPEAL LOWER COURT RULING ON WEEKLY VERSION OF FOSAMAX[®]

Jerusalem, Israel, August 29, 2003 - Teva Pharmaceutical Industries Ltd. (Nasdaq: TEVA) announced today that the U.S. District Court in Wilmington, Delaware has issued an opinion following the completion of a trial on U.S. Patent No. 5,994,329, which covers a once-a-week method of administering alendronate sodium, a generic version of Merck & Co.'s Fosamax[®]. The court found the patent to be valid and that Teva's abbreviated new drug application for the product would infringe the patent.

Mr. Israel Makov, President and CEO of Teva commented: "We are, of course, disappointed by the court's decision just as we were last November, when the same judge ruled against us in the case related to the daily version of alendronate. Following a review of today's decision, we will request an expedited appeal."

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Teva's appeal to the Federal Circuit on the decision handed down in November was heard on June 3, 2003 and the Company is awaiting a decision.
