[LOGO - BELLSOUTH (R)]

AT&T AND BELLSOUTH TO MERGE

THIS MERGER TAKES PLACE IN THE FACE OF RAPIDLY EVOLVING TECHNOLOGY, SERVICE CONVERGENCE, AND EVER-INTENSIFYING MARKETPLACE COMPETITION. THE MERGER IS

Edgar Filing: BELLSOUTH CORP - Form DEFA14A

- o It combines two of America's most respected companies, companies with complementary strengths and a heritage of integrity, exceptional customer service, and premier network and technical competencies.
- o Together, these companies will help make America's communications and entertainment infrastructure equal or surpass the most advanced networks in the world today.

THE MERGER OF AT&T AND BELLSOUTH WILL ENHANCE THE RESILIENCY AND RESTORABILITY OF ESSENTIAL NATIONAL INFRASTRUCTURE. THE MERGER ENHANCES NATIONAL SECURITY BY STRENGTHENING A DIVERSE TELECOMMUNICATIONS NETWORK AND PRESERVING UNPARALLELED WIRELESS AND WIRELINE CAPABILITIES IN THE UNITED STATES.

- o The merger will make available to BellSouth increased capital to invest in infrastructure in BellSouth's region, including investments to restore and enhance telecommunications infrastructure destroyed by Hurricane Katrina.

THE MERGER OF AT&T AND BELLSOUTH WILL DRIVE THE NEXT EVOLUTION IN WIRELESS TECHNOLOGY AND HEIGHTEN WIRELESS COMPETITION.

- o As technology and the marketplace evolve, the merger is needed to foster investment in and further evolution of the Cingular Wireless business, a joint venture of AT&T and BellSouth.
 - > Governance of Cingular requires consensus between AT&T and BellSouth because voting control of Cingular is split equally between both companies.
 - > Given that AT&T and BellSouth remain independent companies with diverse interests, the consensus required to operate Cingular increasingly will lead to delays in decisionmaking and conflicts over crucial matters such as optimal investment levels, branding, marketing, service offers, technology, etc.
 - > The separation of Cingular from both its parents also prevents integration of its network and offerings with those of its parents' wireline and broadband networks, something important to the future development of the industry.
- o The merger will enable AT&T and BellSouth to create a single IP-based network from the three separate networks of Cingular, BellSouth, and AT&T. This single network will generate efficiencies and innovations that would not occur absent the merger. This will:
 - > speed the next evolution in wireless technology as the combined companies implement a common architecture that supports both wireless and wireline services and products, enabling the integration, for example, of wireless offerings with Web-based VoIP capabilities and of video capabilities with wireless handsets;
 - > simplify customer service offers by permitting the integrated offering and billing of wireless and wireline services under a unified brand;
 - > intensify wireless competition with other providers, including Sprint/Nextel, which is integrating wireline and wireless services for business customers, the already integrated Verizon

Edgar Filing: BELLSOUTH CORP - Form DEFA14A

Wireless, and T Mobile, which is focused on the consumer segment.

- o The merger fully reunites the inventor of cellular technology, AT&T Labs, with a wireless provider and network to foster even greater innovation in the future.

THE MERGER OF AT&T AND BELLSOUTH WILL ALSO EXPAND VIDEO COMPETITION AND BRING LOWER RATES AND ENHANCED CONTROL OF T.V. PROGRAMMING TO MORE CONSUMERS.

- o Consumers will benefit because the merger will allow AT&T to extend competitive, interactive video services to BellSouth's service territory faster than would likely occur but for the merger.
 - > While AT&T has committed to deploy competitive interactive video services throughout its service territory, BellSouth has yet to decide whether or to what extent to deploy such services.
 - > The merger will eliminate any uncertainty and support a faster and broader deployment of alternative video services to millions of consumers in BellSouth's region than would otherwise occur.
 - > As the GAO found and the FCC recognized just last week, video competition from a broadband service provider reduces rates (23% on average for basic cable) and improves service quality.
- o The broader reach made possible by the merger will enable the combined company to obtain essential programming services on more flexible terms than otherwise would be possible. This will permit more effective competition with incumbent video distributors and service offerings more responsive to consumer needs.
- o The merger will also enhance opportunities for program diversity by creating a more effective alternative distribution outlet that will reduce concentration and buying power among incumbent video distributors and reach a larger base of customers to support new programming.

THE MERGER OF AT&T AND BELLSOUTH WILL ALSO EXPAND BROADBAND DEPLOYMENT.

- o Economies of scope achieved in the provision of voice, data, video, and wireless services to more consumers will improve the economics of broadband deployment.
 - > When AT&T received video franchising authority from the Texas PUC, the enhanced economies enabled AT&T to announce deployment of broadband technology to every wire center in Texas.
 - > As the local authorization process is reformed, these same economies would enable the combined company to deploy broadband to more consumers throughout the combined companies' service territory.
- o The merger will enhance efforts to bring broadband to rural areas by enabling the combined companies to spread the research and development costs of wireless broadband technologies over a broader base of customers.

THE MERGER OF AT&T AND BELLSOUTH WILL ALSO CREATE ENORMOUS EFFICIENCIES IN THE DELIVERY OF VOICE, DATA, AND VIDEO SERVICES.

- o The merger will create $18 billion in synergies.

Edgar Filing: BELLSOUTH CORP - Form DEFA14A

- o These savings will financially strengthen the combined company, enhance its ability to invest, and translate into heightened competition, rapidly improving technologies and services, and increased savings for consumers.

THE MERGER WILL ONLY ENHANCE COMPETITION AND BENEFIT CONSUMERS.

- o It will create a provider better able to innovate, invest, and compete as it enters new markets and faces the challenge of rapidly evolving technology, service convergence, and ever-intensifying competition in its traditional markets from an array of nontraditional providers.
