Unsolicited SCOR offer Q&A - April 2, 2007

Why did Converium reject the unsolicited SCOR offer, initially presented to Converium on the weekend of February 17/18, 2007?

The Board of Directors of Converium carefully considered the unsolicited proposal by SCOR to acquire Converium for 0.5 SCOR shares plus CHF 4 per share for the whole of the share capital of Converium.

The Directors were unanimous in their rejection of this proposal, which they believed fundamentally failed to recognise the value of Converium's franchise and growth prospects, and was, therefore, not in the best interests of Converium, its shareholders, and its customers. Both Converium's Board of Directors and management were united in rejecting the bid.

Why does the SCOR offer undervalue Converium?

Converium is a profitable and strong reinsurer with a well recognised position in the market place. Converium's Board of Directors believes that the Company has the potential to achieve a sustainable return on equity of 14% by 2009. This compares favourably to the vague 13% ROE target for the combined group as disclosed by SCOR.

Further, reinsurance clients value diversification and multi-line reinsurance solutions as well as the services provided by Converium.

SCOR quotes a headline offer price at CHF 21.1; however the offer is composed of 80% of their own shares. From February 19, 2007 to the date hereof (April 2, 2007), their proposed offer (0.5 shares + CHF 4) is below Converium's current share price.

The unattractiveness of the current offer is compounded by significant execution risks due to the hostile character of the proposed transaction, including the risk of business and key personnel attrition, as well as pressure on financial strengths ratings, could be considerable. Ultimately, the hostility of the deal could destroy value for all stakeholders.

What is Converium's strategy going forward?

Converium's strategy is all about disciplined underwriting and capital management. We have clearly laid out how we aim to grow our top-line premiums, whilst maintaining sound underwriting discipline. Converium's new management is also very committed to capital discipline - if we can't grow the business, we will return the required capital to shareholders.

The key elements of the road map to a sustainable ROE of 14% by 2009 are: to grow the book of business to USD 3 billion, benefiting from the opportunities offered by the upgrade and regaining a further share of wallet; improving the non-life combined ratio to 96%, in line with peers; slashing corporate centre costs by USD 20 million; lifting the book investment yield to 5%; boosting capital efficiency by returning USD 300 million to shareholders; and increasing hybrid debt to USD 500 million.

How many shares does SCOR own?

12,200,000 Converium shares or 8,3% of the total capital are in SCOR's ownership. The remaining 36,120,350 shares will only be transferred after receipt of approvals from regulatory authorities and competition commissions. The total corresponds to 32.94% of Converium's registered share capital.

Would Converium consider an improved offer?

Consistent with its fiduciary duties, management and the Board would duly consider any new offer to shareholders, from SCOR, or from any other party.

Have you had discussions with possible White Knights?

In these circumstances, one has to look at a number of options. Converium is a very strong player in Europe with a very good technical reputation and strong footholds in the growth markets in Asia-Pacific, Eastern Europe, Latin America and Middle East. The reinsurance market is small and that automatically means that other industry players cannot afford to ignore the opportunity Converium presents to the market.

What are the next steps?

Upon the publication of the SCOR tender offer for all outstanding registered shares of Converium, pursuant to Rule 14d-9 promulgated under the United States Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended, the Board of Directors will make its recommendation regarding the offer and state its reasons for such position within 10 business days of the commencement of the tender offer.
